

Senior Internal Communications Campaigns Officer (Band 8d) Blood and Transplant

About the Benefits This section details the benefits of working for NHSBT

What's great about this post?

NHS Blood and Transplant is a Special Health Authority, dedicated to saving and improving lives through a wide range of services to the NHS. It has a wide and diverse remit including, blood donation, organ donation and stem cells. The Internal Communications team works across all these areas meaning you will work across a wide remit.

Colleagues are key to NHSBT's success. Our colleagues need to know what is going on, how well we are doing against our strategic goals and what our plans are for the future.

Experience in an internal communications role, gained in a large, complex organisation, will stand you in excellent stead. You'll deliver advice on internal communications and engagement issues, advising on priorities, messages and channels, ensuring there is ongoing dialogue about our future priorities.

You will lead the delivery of specific internal communications campaigns and initiatives. You will have a passion for developing creative content and in reaching a highly mobile and dispersed workforce.

What other opportunities are available to me?

We'll be committed to your training and development from day one. When you join, your manager will welcome you and discuss your future needs & the opportunities available to you. For managers/senior leaders our development opportunities will be discussed with you to explore any development areas.

Shine is our approach to learning and development. It includes all the ways that we can support you to 'shine' and excel in your role. It is open to everyone at NHSBT and covers a breadth of activities to support personal and professional growth. The areas we cover include, but are not limited to, Leadership, Management, Scientific and Clinical development.
